For just $5.99 per month, you can listen to radio reading services and other blindness-related content with the Sero app for IOS.

The Sero app is available as a download from the Apple app store for a subscription fee of $5.99 per month. Once you have installed the app, Sero will allow you to listen to everything from every internet-connected radio reading service for the blind around the world to a large selection of described television programs and movies.

To download the Sero app:
If you have Seri enabled, tell Seri to serch for Sero in the App store. Alternatively, you can open the Apple App Store and do a manual search for Sero, then hit the search button in the lower right-hand corner of your IOS device.

Once the app is downloaded, you will need to set up an account. Sero prefers that your username be your phone number. You will then need a password containing a combination of upper- and lower-case letters, numbers, and special characters such as hyphen, dollar sign, or at sign.

Once your account information has been established, Sero will send you back to the Apple app store to establish your subscription. You will be prompted to enter your credit card information, which will include your credit card number, expiration date, and 3-digit code listed on the back of your card. Once you have set up your subscription with Apple, you're all set.

Not enjoying Sero enough to justify the $5.99 monthly charge? Go to the app store, look under your name at the top of the store, find subscriptions, double tap on subscriptions, locate Sero, double tap on it, and locate "unsubscribe", and double tap on it. You are now unsubscribed from Sero.
